As per the China standard "GB 2626-2019" which related to KN95, requirements on the labelling specified under clause 7. (Sorry I do not have English version, attached Chinese version FYI.

Highlights below:

1. Labelling on the product

- a. Name; trade name or others that related to manufacturer or supplier;
- b. Model & model number (if applicable)
- c. The standard number; + filter level for filter components; Eg. "GB 2626-2019 KN90"

2. Labelling on the package

Should be appeared on the package of the unit of sales

- a. Name, trade name or others that related to manufacturer or supplier;
- b. Maks type, model & model number (if applicable);
- c. The standard number; + filter level for filter components; Eg. "GB 2626-2019 KN90"
- d. applicable permission or certification information;
- e. manufacturing data (at least with year/month) or batch number; shelf-life (at least per year)
- f. the wording "参见制造商提供信息" (refer to the information supplied by the manufacturer)
- g. Storage condition recommended by the manufacturer (at least with temperature & humidity).

BTW, if you want to purchase the masks for healthcare professional use, I would recommend to buy those approved by NMPA. Unlike EU, medical masks are classified as Class II in China which meant should have gone through thorough review/audit by the authority. And there's a official database to check the validity:

[5.1.2h]

There're other China standards for medical masks which are YY0469-2011 (Surgical masks) & GB 19083-2010 (Medical protective mask, the best).
