Hallo [redacted]

Vandaag opgevraagd.
 Volgens mij goed om ui de eerste hand wat info te hebben.
 Fijn weekend!

---

Yes , we are doing reasonably ok during this uncertain time . Hope you would be fine .

As I had stated in one of my mails to you that we are going to have a complete lock down until 14th of April . Though Government of India Is denying any report of any further extension but all that would depends upon the number of cases coming up everyday . As on now we are finding at least 300 new cases per day . Government is doing it best to control the epidemic by enforcing lock down to maintain social distancing .

Pharmaceutical sector and transportation is put under essential services and they are supposed to run but unfortunately both the sectors are adversely getting impacted because of people are scared of coming out of their home and in view of that the operations are at a very low level and government is trying their best by asking PHARMA industry to run to optimum level by making their employees understand about the urgency of availability of medicines .

Though no passenger planes are operating but gradually some of the airlines have started cargo but with limited flights . Perhaps the things would improve post 14th April .

Hope this much of information will give you some idea about the situation prevailing in India .

Production of essential services is going on with 30% manpower on rotational basis.

Seaport are almost stand still but little movement as local people refused to work and government do not have any control.

Air shipment movement has begun in last two days with 5-7 days of backlog and after booking the flight it might take to actually airlift the goods in 5-7 days with high air freights.

But Indian officials are closely monitoring the situations and it will change in coming days to export the material as they are taking necessary actions to smother the flow.

It is matter of few days and at least export should be inline as earlier for essential services.

Hope you are doing well and having a nice weekend.

Met vriendelijke groet, Kind regards,
