Hello [5.1.2e]

I have no reason to believe that the airlines use a different form.

Besides that, I would like to share a message that we got from a colleague of [5.1.2e] of the ministry of I&W (unfortunately I don't have a name. [5.1.2e] it seems to me that it is a colleague of the directie Luchtvaart):

"Passagiers moeten sowieso 'fit for purpose' zijn om te kunnen boarden. Daar moet een luchtvaartmaatschappij op toezien. Om dit toezicht te verstevigen gaan we uiterlijk 17 april a.s. luchtvaartmaatschappijen verplichten om passagiers uit hoog-risico gebieden te checken op een gezondheidsverklaring en adviseren wij hen dringend om 14 dagen thuisquarantaine in acht te nemen. We zijn in gesprek met KLM om deze verklaring al eerder te introduceren. Voor de hoog-risico gebieden houden wij de lijst van EASA aan. (...)"

Best regards,

[5.1.2e]

[5.1.2e]

Ministerie van VWS

Hi [5.1.2e]

As far as I understood, this is the exact form. But I am not so familiar with these issues.

May be, you could discuss this further with my colleague [5.1.2e] from the ministry of health (cc).

Best,

[5.1.2e]

Hi [REDACTED]

Thank you. OK, so there is an element of discretion. Sorry to ask one more question: is the form you linked me to the exact same form that will be given by airlines to passengers? Or will it be just something similar? I'm asking so that our travel advice is not misleading.

That's my last question I think!

Thanks,

I think there is indeed space for (mis)interpretation. "een van de vragen..."="one of the questions" /"any of the questions"

But I can't tell you how strict this is handled in practice. If a person can explain clear that medicine like in your example mentioned is needed, that there will be made exemptions.

Best,

[REDACTED]

Dear [REDACTED]

Thank you for your quick reply. Could I check one point please. The Q&A (below) say that if a passenger says yes to 'een van de vragen' then they can't fly. Does that mean if they answer yes to ANY of the questions they can't fly? This would mean that a passenger who was breastfeeding, taking medication or allergic to eggs, for example, couldn't fly, which seems a bit odd. Or is it if they answer yes to ONE particular question - which I imagine might be the 'Heeft u op dit moment koorts boven de 38,5'?

Thank you very much for clarifying!

 Wat betekent de gezondheidsverklaring?

De gezondheidsverklaring vraagt reizigers naar hun gezondheidssituatie, zoals of ze het coronavirus hebben of symptomen van het virus. De luchtvaartmaatschappijen moeten de passagiers vragen om deze gezondheidsverklaring in te vullen. De verklaring moet voor het instappen worden ingevuld. Als op de verklaring één van de vragen met 'ja' is beantwoord, dan mag deze passagier niet mee met de vlucht. Bij aankomst in Nederland kan de GGD of de Koninklijke Marechaussee de gezondheidsverklaring controleren.
