Hi, [redacted]

Attached the latest edited version of our manuscript. Have you got any more comments? Or shall I send it back to them?

All the best,

Dear [redacted] and [redacted]

Sorry that I was not able to get back to you earlier. [redacted]
 [redacted]

I attach a version of your manuscript with another round of edits/point for clarifications from me and [redacted]. There are not many and they should be easy to address. After this round we may be able to prepare a final for approval. There will be minor changes to the figures [redacted] will handle them [redacted].

Meanwhile we can continue to work on the text and you can already line up the co-authors for their approval next week if possible by Wednesday so we can publish on Thursday – what do you think?

Kind regards

[redacted]

Dear 5.1.2e

I have made progress going through the manuscript and this is now with the Editor-in-chief, according to our routines, for checking. We will get back to you as soon as possible regarding the manuscript, but there may be a delay, as the Editor-in-chief is not well today.

Looking forward to being further in contact, I wish you and 5.1.2e in the meantime a nice weekend.

Kind regards,

5.1.2e

Dear 5.1.2e

Thank you for the edits. Please find attached our tracked version with all the requested changes.

Regarding the flowchart of the review process: we are now providing an additional figure. Our preference is for it to be a Supplementary figure (attached with the Disclaimer). However, if the editing style requires it to be a figure within the review, we are also attaching the figure pdf without captions.

Kind regards,

Dear 5.1.2e and 5.1.2e

I hope that the edited version of the manuscript I sent last week arrived well to you.
If you are working on this still, could you please provide us with an update on when you think you can send us the next version?
Indeed, this will be helpful for planning from our side.

Wishing you a nice day,
Kind regards,

Subject: Eurosurveillance edited version of manuscript MS 20-01134

Dear 5.1.2e and 5.1.2e

Apologies for the delay. This took a bit more time to edit than I anticipated, as it is a quite large manuscript.

Attached, you will find an edited version of your manuscript.

I kindly ask you to please go through this version to see if you are happy with the editing, and to please address the editorial comments, which can be viewed in the 'track-change' mode.

Please note that there are also comments after the main text, in the 'conflict of interest' and 'reference' sections. For the references, please do not make changes using a reference software as this will interfere with our editing software, but please indicate any change you would like to implement in the answers to the bubble comments.

If you agree with my edits, you can simply accept them, however if you make any new revisions, I kindly ask you to please keep these tracked so we can more easily see what has been done.

Overall, the comments should be quite straightforward, so we would prefer, if possible, to receive the next version of the manuscript by 9 am on Tuesday 23 February. Should you need more time however, please just inform us, so we can plan accordingly.

In the next round of editing, according to our routines, your manuscript will be checked by the Editor-in-chief, so there could be a few more comments at that stage. I will also be in touch regarding the designed figures.

Looking forward to further corresponding concerning the manuscript, I kindly ask you to please remain contactable this week as, all being well, we will attempt to finalise everything as soon as possible. I also remind below on our procedures for regular manuscripts, in case you wish to prepare your co-authors.

Kind regards,

5.1.2e

Procedures for regular manuscripts: Once all issues regarding a given manuscript have been satisfactorily addressed subsequent to editing, the manuscript is finalised, and a final edited version of the manuscript is then sent by the editor to the corresponding author. At that final stage, we expect the corresponding author to ensure that all named authors see the final edited version, and, if all authors approve of this final edited version for publication, we kindly request the corresponding author to state in an email to us, that all named authors have seen and approve the final edited version for publication.

Dear 5.1.2e and dear 5.1.2e

I am currently working on your manuscript, and, all being well, I will try to send you an edited version by the end of the day on Friday 19 February.

Should I experience any delays however, I will send you an update about the situation around 2:30 pm tomorrow.

In the meantime, I take the opportunity of this email to inform on our procedures for regular manuscripts, in case you wish to prepare co-authors.
